

CARLA CALABRESE

Family Law

One of the most successful family law attorneys in North Texas, Carla Calabrese is decisive, proactive, and driven. But Calabrese makes sure that her clients understand they'll be seeking solutions and best outcomes, not blood. (Not at first, anyway.)

More and more clients are seeking this decidedly reasonable approach in collaborative divorce, complex property division, paternity and parentage, and pre- and post-marital agreements.

"Collaborative law keeps clients in control of the outcome, rather than turning over their fate to the courts," Calabrese says. "It's more private, and many clients are finding it's more productive. The question isn't 'why collaborative?' It's really 'why in the world not?'"

Combining large-firm experience with boutique attention and efficiencies, Calabrese has helped build Calabrese Huff into a North Texas leader by focusing on client goals and by helping them achieve better long-term results.

A respected attorney with more than 20 years of successful client advocacy, Calabrese has been honored as one of the Top 50 Women Lawyers in Texas (Texas Monthly); Best Lawyers in America, Family Law and Collaborative Family Law; Texas Super Lawyer (Texas Monthly); Best Lawyers in Dallas (D Magazine), and by her Collaborative Law Institute of Texas colleagues as one of five Exceptional Collaborative Practitioners in Texas. She is a member of The Collaborative Alliance, the American Academy of Adoption Attorneys, and the American Academy of Assisted Reproduction Attorneys.

To give back, Calabrese founded Hope International, a non-profit agency that has helped hundreds of orphans find adoptive homes and gives aid to those children left behind. Calabrese and her husband, Jay Grob, have two children of their own and actively support this worthy cause.
